Your question

Good morning,

I was recently interviewing for a job and I learned the hiring manager was reluctant about hiring me because I didn't have some of the technical skills they were looking for. I went immediately from the interview to the main library downtown and checked out a few books on programming languages. After about a month of studying the books, I contacted the hiring manager again to let him know what I'd been up to and I'll be starting my new job next week.

Just wanted to let you know that the library had a direct impact on my career. Thanks for everything you do!
